INTRODUCTION

God is worshipped in numerous ways. He is invoked in an image, or in any attractive natural object, and is adored with the feeling that He is present before the worshipper. The worshipping devotee looks upon Him as his invisible father, mother, king, protector and friend. Attention is paid to the object of worship with fervour and tenderness of feeling. The worshipper is careful in offering to the worshipped all the details of divine honour and hospitality. The best articles that could be procured are consecrated to Him. In return, the devotee gets divine grace and protection. This is the usual form of external worship.

There are aspirants who like to worship God in a more interior way. They too may adopt some kind of external worship as long as they feel the need for it. But their chief means of worship is thought and word. Some of them may completely give up outward rituals of worship and concentrate their mind entirely on divine thoughts. These worshippers need support for their practice. Divine Names, holy formulas, hymns from the scriptures and devotional songs supply them with the necessary support for their God-ward thoughts and feelings. They may combine the performance of external worship and the practice of japa of Divine Names for some time. Then they may devote themselves exclusively to mental and oral worship when they attain maturity for it.

A still higher form of worship comprises in pure contemplation on God. Usually this is a stage which can be reached by an aspirant only after long training. Advanced religious seekers also find that the chanting of devotional songs and the repetition of God's Names are immensely helpful; for they alone give purity and concentration of mind necessary for the life of uniform meditation. Only through divine grace a person comes to feel attraction towards God and the obstacles in his path to God are removed. Therefore sages and saints who prescribe for persons who desire to cultivate love of God say that they should continuously resort to the Divine Name in order to bring about purity of mind, depth in contemplation, removal of obstacles, and fitness for receiving divine grace.

Taking the Divine Name is called japa. A person may utter a Name of God or a formula containing some divine thought, or a passage describing God's qualities. He may remember them, or may utter them in a manner just audible to himself. When this process is repeated continuously and daily, at fixed hours, it becomes the practice of japa. Complete attention to the words of the mantra is the essence of japa. Portions of the Vedas, texts like the Bhagavadgita and passages from the Puranas, or a Divine Name taught by the guru supply the theme for japa. A single Name of God may be repeated without break. This mode of worship is considered valuable even for a beginner as it helps him to contain his mind in a spiritual horizon and save the trouble of hunting for external ingredients of worship which are often secured by causing hurt to others. Inner spiritual practices are always difficult for the beginners. Silent japa may make them sleepy. They may feel dryness and disinclination to perform it continuously. So for them the method of kirtana is prescribed. By chanting aloud the Names of God, a distracted mind will get greater concentration and peace, as the words uttered by the mouth are listened by the ears. When a band of people assemble in a place and chant kirtanas loudly, devotional feelings are aroused in them continuously. Congregational singing of God's glory is called Samkirtana. Nama japa, Nama kirtana and Nama samkirtana supply the easiest means for cultivating devotion to God.

CC-0. Mumukshu Bhawan Varanasi Collection. Digitized by eGangotri

Only a mind capable of deep concentration and having a cultivated interest can repeat the same Name of God continuously without losing mental grip over it. A garland of Divine Names, strung in the form of verses, is employed from very early times for japa and chant. The sahasranamas came into existence in this manner. Men have a natural preference for round and symmetrical figures. Itihasas and Puranas contain stanzas numbering to multiples of thousand. Mahayana Buddhists have their scriptures in sahasrikas. It is only natural, therefore, that the Mahabharata got incorporated into it a thousand Names of Vishnu. This Vishnu sahasranama has paved the way for other 'thousand Namas' of different Deities found in the Puranas, some of which might be formal and literary improvements on the earliest one, avoiding its repetitions and phrases. But the importance of Vishnu sahasranama is great not only because of its content but also because of its vogue for a longer period and in a larger area.

This garland of one thousand Names occurs in the Mahabharata as a part of the dialogue between Bhishma and Yudhisthira, reported by Vaisampayana to Janamejaya and compiled by Vyasa in the great Epic. Yudhisthira wants to know: Who is the one God? What is the supreme goal? By singing the praise and performing the worship of whom man will reach the highest end of life? What is man's highest duty? By repeating to oneself what formula is a living creature delivered from bondage of the world? In reply to these questions Bhishma gave the following discourse.

The Lord of the universe is the one object of worship. He has no beginning or end, and He is the unchanging father and mother of all. At the beginning of this Cycle of existence, the universe stemmed out of Him and it will return to Him at the end. By chanting His praise daily, by worshipping Him, by meditating upon Him, by serving Him, by uttering His Names and by bowing down before Him with great reverence man will go beyond all sorrows. The Supreme Being is omnipresent and so He is called Vishnu. He is the goal of all, and His thousand Names ward off all sin and fear.

After thus indicating the greatness of this garland of one thousand Divine Names, Bhishma recited in one hundred and seven stanzas, the one thousand Names in succession. In an epilogue of twentytwo stanzas, he further elucidated the greatness of God and the efficacy of this hymn of divine Names. He restated thus:

The star-spangled heavens, together with the sun, the moon, the earth and the oceans, as well as space and its directions are all held in their position by the energy of Vasudeva the Essence of all. Mind and the sense organs, goodness, energy, strength and courage, the body and the embodied Soul—are all ultimately Vasudeva. Sages, forefathers, gods and elements—the whole world mobile and still—have come from Narayana. Krishna controls gods, demigods, angels and men. Action and contemplation, arts, crafts, and learning, and also practical knowledge and knowledge of scriptures, all come from Him. In reality, Vishnu is the One Being. He became manifold and separate as entities in Nature covering the three worlds.

CC-0. Mumukshu Bhawan Varanasi Collection. Digitized by eGangotri

He enjoys every thing as the Self of all beings; but He himself really undergoes no change.

Those who cultivate bhakti for Vasudeva cannot be angry, jealous, greedy and impure in mind. They become true servants of God by holy deeds done in their past births. Those who look upon Vasudeva as the only support and have no other interest, shed all sin and at last reach the Divine Reality. The lover of God has no evil to fear. He does not shrink from birth, old age, disease and death. He overcomes all difficulties by chanting the thousand Names daily with joy. He gets peace of mind strength for patience, riches, courage and power of remembrance. By repeating or listening to these Divine Names, a Brahmana will have divine wisdom, a Kshatriya will get victory, a Vaisya will increase his wealth and a Sudra will attain the best joy. All the excellences which men seek — virtue, wealth, objects of enjoyment and children, fame, brilliance, ability and beauty—will result from this particular form of worship, namely repeating the thousand Names of Vishnu.

It may be particularly pointed out that Bhishma lays down the manner in which this japa should be done: The devotee who wants to perform it properly must be pure in body and mind when he takes to it; he should be full of loving remembrance of God; and his mind should be centred in the Divine Names with continuous alertness.

Religious scriptures follow the methods of upadesa and vichara. The first imply direct instruction which is to be received and followed with feeling, faith, and concentration of thought and action. The second type encourages enquiry and discussion. The path of bhakti is mainly based on upadesa and the path of jnana, though generally starting with upadesa, develops into vichara. Texts like the Vishnu sahasranama are meant to give instructions to be accepted and followed in practice. Feeling is more important than reasoning in the process of repeating the Names of God. Usually therefore an investigation into the meaning is not undertaken by devotees who practice japa of such texts. But complete ignorance of the general sense of the words usually makes their repetition very superficial and often perfunctory. Such holy texts are like symbols used for invoking God and so the general purport is more important than the grammatical and analytical meaning. For a devotee it is enough to feel that the referent of every word is God; and if by the mere remembrance of the word, his mind melts into a flow of divine thoughts, the purpose of repetition will be served. But most people repeat mechanically, sometimes even circling round a number of lines over and over again, because these groups of lines happen to have a common beginning or end word. In order to avoid such errors and to go deeper in concentration on them it is highly necessary to have a general understanding of the meaning of the words.

It is for the purpose of rendering some help in this direction that an explanatory English rendering of each Name is given in this publication. It is not a verbatim translation but an explanatory rendering based on the commentary of Sri Sankaracharya. In the commentary several alternative meanings are given, but only one of them that appeared to be best suited for the beginner is adopted here. There are a number of other commentaries and glosses on this text explaining the Names from different religious view-points. They are confusing to a bhakta and so only the trend supplied by the sankarabhashya is followed.

One of the vexed questions often raised in this connection is the repetition of names and senses confronted in this and similar other texts. Laboured scholarly precision or conciseness is not the aim of devotional scriptures. They particularly repeat ideas and words in order to produce an affective atmosphere suitable to raise the mind of the reader to a high level of divine fervour; their aim is not at all analytical and critical. Sri Sankaracharya, while commenting on Gita ch II. 24, states this great truth: One cannot charge these verses with the defect of idle repetition. Whatever has to be said about Atman can be compressed in a verse. All the rest may be tautological in word or sense. But since the reality of the Self is very hard to understand, the same thing is repeated under some pretext or other so that it is somehow made comprehensible to man so that he may find liberation from the round of existence. It is only those who cannot love a thing that quarrel with the repetition of that thing. Listeners often have infinite patience, as we see it daily, with those who narrate the same story, if they like the narrator. To a devotee of God, His glories sung in diverse ways in endless repetitions give only unbroken joy.

However, Sri Sankaracharya has striven to justify the repetition of a word by giving a fresh interpretation at every instance of its reappearance; and the repetition of the same-sense under different words has also been justified on the ground of difference in the words. This may give some satisfaction to the literary critic. But this is immaterial for those who use the text for devotional purposes. It is also to be noted that the word sahasra poetically means only a large number or infinite as it is found in Names 224, 226, 227, 306, 483 & 826.

It has been stated many times that the Mahabharata is a superb moksha sastra and that the Bhagavadgita and the sahasra namas forming portions of it, are the two shining peaks of Divine love and wisdom expressed in incisive words. The Vishnu sahasranama is only an epitome of the Gita in a different pattern. Both of them teach in their own inimitable way the goal and the way to the highest human destiny which may be summed up thus:

CC-0. Mumukshu Bhawan Varanasi Collection. Digitized by eGangotri

The Supreme Reality is One and beyond all description. Yet It may be hinted at by innumerable words. One may refer to the Ineffable Deity as It or He or She. He is responsive to human needs and desires and yet He is impersonal and beyond all relations. He is Sunya, Tattva, Viswa, Atman and every being that exists. He has become the whole universe and yet He is beyond it, unaffected by it. All that is attractive to men, and even dreaded by them, are His own diverse forms. The sun and the moon and the stars and the ocean and the earth are He. He is the striking weapon and the merciful protector. He destroys what he has created, and it is He alone that creates, protects, and increases whatever that exists. He is a loving father and bestower of everything coveted by creatures. He is the Master out of fear for whom the sun and the moon and the stars move in their path according to the law without fail. In fact the Names of the Sahasra nama emphasise the same theme taught in the Upanishads, namely, Sarvatitatva, Sarvesvaratva, Sarvantaryamitva, Sarvatmatva, Sarvotpattisthitilayahetutva, Sarvalokaniyantritva, Sarvasaranyatva, Sarvasamrakshakatva, Sarvadoshavinasakatva,

CC-0. Mumukshu Bhawan Varanasi Collection. Digitized by eGangotri

Sarvapaapabhayaharatva, Sarvadharmamulatva and Mokshapradatva. These are the central teachings of all the scriptures.

Finally this stotra maha mantra is to be tested in no touchstone other than spiritual experience; for, as a great mantra, it is an auditory representation of the Deity. It has been the experience of innumerable religious aspirants who have been repeating it as part of their daily devotion or as an occasional act of piety, for a prolonged period in life, that their devotion to this stotra has enabled them to realise in some measure the fruits promised by Bhishma. It is fervently hoped that the explanatory meaning given in this edition of the book will help many who wish to confirm their devotion to Bhagavan Vasudeva through the help of this well-attested sahaṣranama that has come down to us from a very ancient past.

MEDITATIONS ON VISHNU

शान्ताकारं भुजगशयनं पद्मनाभं सुरेशं
विश्वाधारं गगनसदृशं मेघवर्णं शुभाङ्गम् ।
लक्ष्मीकान्तं कमलनयनं योगिभिर्ध्यानगम्यं
वन्दे विष्णुं भवभयहरं सर्वलोकैकनाथम् ॥

I adore Vishnu who is peaceful in form, who reclines on the serpent bed, who has the lotus in his navel, who is the Ruler of gods, who is the support of the universe, who is all-pervasive like ether, who has the hue of the rain-bearing cloud, whose limbs are auspicious, whose eyes are compared to the lotus petal, who is meditated and realised in the hearts of yogis, who removes the fear of rebirth, who is the spouse of Lakshmi and who is the one Master of all the worlds.

मेघश्यामं पीतकौशेयवासं श्रीवत्साङ्कं कौस्तुभोद्भासिताङ्गम् ।
पुण्योपेतं पुण्डरीकायताक्षं विष्णुं वन्दे सर्वलोकैकनाथम् ॥

I adore Vishnu who is of the hue of the rain-bearing cloud, who is dressed in golden silk, who has the mark called srivatsa, who is shining forth with the ornament known as kaustubha, who has elongated eyes compared to the lotus petal, who is approached through religious merit only, and who is the one Master of all the worlds.

नमः समस्तभूतानामादिभूताय भूभृते ।
अनेकरूपरूपाय विष्णवे प्रभविष्णवे ॥

Salutations to Vishnu who is before the beginning of all created beings, who is the support of the earth, whose forms are innumerable, and who is the Master and Ruler of all.

सशङ्खचक्रं सकिरीटकुण्डलं सपीतवस्त्रं सरसीरुहेक्षणम् ।
सहारवक्षस्थलशोभिकौस्तुभं नमामि विष्णुं शिरसा चतुर्भुजम् ॥

I bow down before Vishnu with my head touching the ground—four-armed Vishnu who has conch and discus in the hands, who is adorned with a diadem and ear-ornaments, who is clad in yellow clothes, who has lotus eyes and whose chest is beautiful with necklace and kaustubha.
